Chapter 1 by Story Wars

Percy was sitting in his fathers palace, fuming. It had been 5 years since he had accepted Zeus' offer of immortality, back when he was 16. Now he served Posideon as God of storms. All of his friends had moved on, Annabeth, Grover, even Thalia.

Chapter 2 by dragonsofyore

The God of storms, it had seemed to good to pass up. But now Percy wished he had. Annabeth married someone else, at least she was happy. Furious, Percy created storms that battered the west coast for days, causing flooding, killing mortals, but Percy didn't care. Grover traveled preserving nature in anyway he could, was reincarnated as an iris, the flower was destroyed in one of Percy's storms. Thalia was struck in battle, serving her lady Artemis. All mad Percy bitter, and hateful.

Chapter 3 by Tobi Steele

The gods had been desperately begging him to calm down for the past few years, ever since that fateful day.

He had been sitting on the floor in Cabin Three, leaning against his bunk bed and staring up at the ceiling as he made the room look like Cabin One. He still wasn't sure why they had made him god of storms. Wasn't that Zues' title? Of course, his storms were different. Zues could only summon rain storms, but Percy could create any natural disaster he wanted, at any level of intensity, anywhere in the world. It was a lot of power, and Percy hadn't exactly been fond of it, ~~but he figured that Annabeth would choose to accept her gift of godhood as well~~

On the other side of the room, Annabeth was sitting on a chair, looking down at her hands. Little did Percy know, she was not happy. As much as she tried to act like she was, she was not happy. It didn't help in and day out she thought about Percy. She focused on her architecture in Rome and tried her best to not focus on him. She had caught her husband cheating on her a few days prior, but had not told him yet. She planned on confronting him about it soon, but she had not been able to leave work for a few days due to constant storms and "natural" disasters. She did not know this was the work of Percy, but she considered visiting him soon. She thought, "I am going to go visit Percy and my mom in Mount Olympus as soon as these storms stop."

After the gods finally got Percy to stop the destruction, Annabeth quickly left for Mount Olympus. She wondered if he had missed her. She found out when she got there and found him curled up in the corner.

"Percy?" She asked, quietly. He turned toward her.

"Annabeth?"
